

Rock star

Onyx takes the leading role in a grand master suite created by a design team renowned for opulent interior architecture

ABOVE Furniture by Bathrooms International, curtain fabric by Clarence House. ABOVE RIGHT Graham Green (left) and Michael Keech.

Ten years ago, Graham Green and Michael Keech left their respective positions at Ralph Lauren to launch interior design company Keech Green. They set about creating what is now their signature style – grand interiors that never compromise on the quality of materials.

This bathroom with its exquisite onyx and burr walnut interior, is a perfect example. It was achieved in collaboration with Bathrooms International, a company with over 35 years experience of sourcing and supplying bathroom furniture to both professional and retail markets.

‘Onyx is an incredibly fragile material and needs

Onyx is an incredibly fragile material careful handling,’ explains Michael. ‘We used 20mm slabs of Bianca pure onyx for the floor and fine 10mm pieces for the wall, which are then embedded on to glass. With back-lit lighting, you then see all the wonderful nuances in the colour of the stone.’

Nickel spheres underneath the double bath as well as the two-sink vanity unit add a lightness to the furniture that, along with Lalique taps, create an art-deco inspired ambience that is at once both classic and timeless. □

Bathrooms International (020-7838 7788; www.bathroomsint.com). Keech Green (020-7351 5701; www.keechgreen.com)